

Module 1.

Statistical datasets

When working with data we often need to find Compact way to describe some of its properties.

It would not be particularly handy or useful, to give someone the ~~entire data~~ entire data set.

Instead we can use some of the statistical properties to describe the data.

Eg we can say some thing about the center or average of the data, or spread or orientation.

In following ~~sections~~ we will be looking at exactly these kind of statistical properties and discuss mean values to describe averages data points, variances that make statement about the spread.

and Co-variances which Characterise (which) orientated Correlations.
